

Social Happenings

July 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24.

Are commanding, self-willed and capable of attaining great poise. You attract people to yourself for guidance and advice. Are argumentative, a clear and sound reasoner, generally of good disposition, but can be sarcastic and cutting. Naturally love or hate strongly, but do not cultivate hatred. Apt to idealize those you love. Desire to make people better.

July 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31.

Are quiet and secretive in manner and not always fair with yourself or others. Overcome this trait, for you are a good talker, sardonic reasoner and apt to carry people with you while they are under your influence. If you wish them to put implicit trust in your integrity, be fair and square. Studious, fond of books, but do not always return those borrowed.

Motored to West Brooklyn

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Lehman of Franklin Grove, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Lehman and Rev. Mr. Shaw motored to West Brooklyn on Friday morning and spent the day with Edwin Slough.

Summer Cottage Dedicated

Thirty or forty friends of Attorney and Mrs. J. W. Watts gathered Friday evening at their new summer cottage at Assembly park and at the same time at a "house warming" assured as this may sound a time of the year. For weeks the judge has been very busy every minute of the day, and when his friends saw the cozy, tasteful cottage, the erection of which he has been superintending and endeavoring to complete before the Assembly opened, they realized he has had plenty of occasion for being busy.

After general visiting and the inspection of the well appointed cottage, a program was carried out, as follows:

Raising the Flag, Messrs. Watts, Soper, and Booth.

Reading "Old Glory" (Riley)

Mrs. Winnie Fry

Dedicatory Talk, Rev. Fred Stone

Response, Judge Watts

Vocal Duet, "What of the Night," O. Watchman, Mr. Charles Floto,

Mrs. Harms.

Reading, Mrs. Charles Floto.

Double Vocal Number, "I Love You Truly," The Perfect Day,"

Carrie Jacobs Bond, Robert Anderson,

Vocal Solo, Mrs. Harms.

Then the guests enjoyed a delicious scramble supper at a long table in the yard. Previous to their coming, they had been requested to suggest names, from which one would be selected for the new cottage. From those suggested that one was chosen, which seemed especially to honor the hostess, Mrs. Watts and without a descending voice it was voted that their gem of a cottage should be called after her name, "The Mary Alice." And so it was christened, Mrs. Bunnell breaking the bottle of water over the flag staff.

The delightful affair was happily managed by Mrs. Robert Anderson, a girlhood friend of the Watts family.

Mr. and Mrs. William Randall and daughter Evelyn, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ringler and Mr. and Mrs. Lee Cook expect to go to Dixon Saturday to attend a picnic in Adelheid park. Sterling Gazette.

SLEDS USED IN THE YUKON

Not Constructed Along Lines of Beauty, but for Hard Work They Are Perfection.

The Yukon sled, while not a thing of beauty, is built to stand all kinds of hard wear, or, as the Irishman said, "It will last forever, and after that can be used for firewood." The sled is about eight feet long, is made of any kind of hard wood, lies close to the ground, costs from $10 to $14, and makes a trail sixteen inches in width. Another pattern is known as the basket sled, and it is to the Yukon sled what a three-masted schooner is to a coal barge. In length it is from eight to fifteen feet, is made of birch, oak or hickory, cuts a trail twenty-two inches in width, costs from $40 to $200, is raised a foot or more from the runners, and, in the best examples, is lashed together with rawhide. The basket sled, as its name implies, is fitted with a basket, into which the load is placed, and from the back of the basket a pair of handles project, to be used in guiding the sled on the trail. It often happens that a Yukon sled will be fitted with a home-made basket, in imitation of its more aristocratic brother. In very cold weather wooden runners are best, but in ordinary circumstances steel or brass runners are used. Wide World Magazine.

Benefits of Royal Academy.

A membership of the Royal Academy of London carries with it numerous advantages. In a word the academy is a benefit society founded on a very generous scale. The pension fund of Burlington house is a splendid one. Any Royal Academician who falls upon hard times or who is prevented by ill health from following his profession may claim a pension, and the pension sometimes runs into as much as $2,000 a year.

The Royal Academician who dies in straitened circumstances and leaves his widow and children insufficiently provided for is not thought any the less of for his ill fortune. The Royal academy shows its sympathy by generously allowing those who were dependent on him a liberal sum for their maintenance. And the wife and the children of a deceased Royal Academician receive many kindnesses and acts of charity from the hands of the living Royal Academicians, which are quite distinct from those given by this academy. National Magazine.

Source of the Brahmaputra.

For 40 years the birthplace of the great Brahmaputra river of India was thought to be among the high valleys of the eastern Himalayas or on the Plateau of Tibet north of those mountains. The theory could not be proved, for hostile Abors in the Himalayan valleys killed the explorers or barred their way when they sought to solve the mystery.

It was believed 20 years ago that the Sangpo river, flowing far eastward through southern Tibet, was the upper part of the Brahmaputra. Marked logs set afloat in the Sangpo were watched for in the Brahmaputra, but were never found. At last, however, the explorers sent out with the troops who have punished the Abors for their massacre of Williamson and his 200 carriers have shown that the two rivers are identical. The Brahmaputra rises far west near the headwaters of the Indus, among the mountains bordering southern Tibet.

Pretty and Novel Device.

A girl who has passed part of her life in Japan invited 16 friends to dinner recently, and in the center of the table was a large bird made of forget-me-nots. That the bird covered a photograph was not known until the finger bowl stage of the banquet. In the water were floating rose petals, and they gradually unfolded into a scroll, on which was written: "Get my secret from the bird." Curiosity was at high pitch when the young hostess turned the key and the bird softly sang "Marie and Philip want me to tell you that they are engaged and invite you all to the wedding." Congratulations then were in order, but the secret was kept so well until the bird talked that no one suspected more than a casual friendship existed between the hostess and her admirer. "GALLERY GOD" SPOILED IT

Why Maurice Barrymore Concealed Dislike for His "Heart of Maryland" Part.

All the good stories which the late Maurice Barrymore, father of Ethel, Lionel and John Barrymore, told on himself never have been published and probably never will be. Barrymore was in Kansas City just prior to his final collapse and here is a story he told: Barrymore was Mrs. Leslie Carter's leading support when that celebrated actress appeared in Belasco's production of "The Heart of Maryland." In the big third act Barrymore, the hero, was in the hands of the designing villain, who had caught him off guard. Two rookies bound Barrymore's hands and the villain, left alone with his prey, taunted the hero. It was Barrymore's "business" to squirm and to wall.

"Oh, if my hands were free," he would repeat several times, as he tried vainly to break the rope which held him fast. The villain would approach and snap his fingers right under Barrymore's nose.

"Loosen my hands, you devil!" Barrymore would exclaim.

One night at this great and exciting moment in the scene Barrymore had just finished his dare to the villain to loosen his hands when the traditional gallery god yelled out in sharp, clear voice:

"Why don't you kick him in the shins, Barry; your feet ain't tied." Barrymore cursed the part from that moment until his dying day.

BLOTCHES ON FACE DRY AND SCALY

Eczema Began in Hair. Spread to Face. Came on Hand and All Over Fingers. Itching Terrible. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

205 Kanter Ave., Detroit, Mich.—"Some time last summer I was taken with eczema. It began in my hair first with red blotches then scaly, spreading to my face. The blotches were red on my face, dry and scaly, not large; on my scalp they were larger, some scabby. They came on my hands. The inside of my hands were all little lumps as though full of shot about one-sixteenth of an inch under the skin. Then they went to the outside and between and all over my fingers. It also began on the bottoms of my feet and the calves of my legs, and itch, oh, My! I never had anything like it and hope I never will again. The itching was terrible. My hands got so I could scarcely work."

"I tried different eczema ointments but without results. I also took medicine for it but it did no good. I saw the advertisement for a sample of Cuticura Ointment and Soap and sent for one. They did me so much good I bought some more using them as per directions and in about three weeks I was well again. Cuticura Soap and Ointment entirely cured me." (Signed) Benj. Passage, Apr. 8, 1912.

A single cake of Cuticura Soap (25c.) and box of Cuticura Ointment (50c.) are often sufficient when all else has failed. Sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

SIX DIE IN COLLISION

Lake Shore Train Demolishes Auto With Nine Aboard.

Bodies of Killed Horribly Mutilated—Seven Injured in Buffalo (N. Y.) Auto-Street Car Crash.

Toledo, Ohio, July 29.—Six persons were killed and two fatally injured south of Alexis, Mich., when a Lake Shore & Michigan Southern train struck an automobile containing nine people. Two women, a man and three boys were killed outright. Their bodies were horribly mutilated.

The automobile belonged to the Cousino family of La Salle, Mich. Up until a late hour the victims were unidentified.

A girl about sixteen years old, who was killed, wore a bracelet bearing the name of Eva Navarre. The initials "R. E. C." appeared on the watch fob of a man killed, and the name of Gideon Cousino was found in a small prayer book which was picked up in the wreck of the machine.

A man and woman were rushed to St. Vincent's hospital, fatally injured. The woman at the hospital had both legs cut off and the man's head was crushed. A baby three years old was the only occupant of the machine that escaped.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 29.—Seven persons were injured, two fatally, in a collision between a big seven-passenger touring car and a trolley car here.

ACCUSED RUN AGAIN

Detroit Aldermen, Under Bond, Seek Seats Anew.

Safe of Council Committee Clerk Edward Schreiter Is Forced and Papers Taken Out.

Detroit, Mich., July 29.—All of the aldermen under arrest on the charge of accepting money for their votes in a street closing case will go before their constituents for re-election, according to the list of primary candidates when time had expired here for filing of petitions.

By direction of Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Jasnowski the safe in the office of Council Committee Clerk Edward Schreiter, Jr., was forced open by a lock expert. When the authorities left the office they carried a bundle of papers taken out of the safe with them.

Alderman Patrick O'Brien was released from custody and the charge against him withdrawn.

The following aldermen appeared in the police court and were remanded for arraignment tomorrow, each giving bail in the sum of $5,000:

Louis Tossy, Louis Brozo, Andrew Walsh, David Rosenthal, Martin J. Ostrowski, Alois Delmel, Joseph Theisen and Frank J. Masen.

Thomas Glinnan, president of the council, and E. R. Schreiter, Jr., secretary of the council committee, were also held for arraignment Tuesday, and each furnished $5,000 bonds. Mr. Schreiter was refused bail.

JUDGE DILLON RESIGNS

Republican Candidate for Governor of Ohio Will Not Run.

Columbus, O., July 29.—Judge Edmund B. Dillon of Columbus, Ohio, chosen by the state convention as the Republican nominee for governor, announced that he would not be a candidate and requested the Republican state central committee to take his name from the ticket. The jurist, in a message sent from Mackinac Island, said: "I accepted the nomination in the full presumption and belief that my acceptance would mean a united party and a single ticket in Ohio. All endeavor along that line has failed and I cannot allow my name to head the ticket this fall under present conditions."

HOME HEALTH CLUB.

By Dr. David H. Reeder, Chicago, Ill.

DIARRHOEA: In this affliction nature is doing all it can to right itself. It is an effort on the part of nature to rid the person afflicted of offending material that might otherwise be fatally dangerous. Hence to check the diarrhoea suddenly means to take chances with the patient's life or health.

Of course the thing to do is to aid nature, which means to remove the cause of the trouble by sensible means. A plentiful and thorough enema of water, warmed to about 95 degrees is the first thing to be given, thus to cleanse the colon and prepare it for the extra work it must do. After the enema has had its effect, give a large dose of castor oil, gaged in size by the capacity of the patient, in years and strength, to take it. That is to say, give to a child what would be a generous dose for a child, and to a grown man who would be a generous dose for him. This treatment is radical and will always prove effective, if there are no complications, which, generally there are not. It is usually and simply a case of over-eating, or the eating of stuff that is not fit for the human stomach, green apples and such, for instance, in a boy. Some sort of a pain killer, or other diarrhoea patent medicine might give relief temporarily, and sound sleep, but the cause not having been removed, the danger will increase every hour.

After the enema and castor oil have had the full effect, give the patient blackberry cordial which should always be kept in homes where there are children, or others liable to diarrhoea or stomach ache, from the cause suggested. This cordial should be made at home and it is a simple though excellent remedy, easily prepared, as follows:

Take of common blackberries thoroughly ripe, enough to extract from them a quart of juice—more may be prepared in the same proportions as to the other ingredients—cover the berries with water in the vessel in which they are to be prepared. Heat slowly until the berries have opened; place the heated—but not cooked—berries in a close bag and express the juice thoroughly. To every quart of juice, after placing it in a porcelain-lined cooking vessel, add a close cloth bag containing half an ounce of cinnamon, allspice and ginger, and a small quantity of cloves and mace. Heat this slowly in the covered vessel for two hours, add two and a half pounds of granulated sugar. After the sugar has thoroughly dissolved, in which it should be assisted by stirring, store the preparation in perfectly clean small bottles; half-pints are a good size.

CLUB NOTES.

North Jackson, Ohio.

Dear Doctor:

I am a farmer's wife, 43 years old. Have had kidney trouble for 10 years sometimes not bad, but just now am suffering burning pains and soreness in small of my back. Darting and itching pain in left breast, mostly at night. Gas in stomach; after meals notice my nostrils and lips burn. Urine scant and light colored; bowels irregular; appetite good. Sweats, tea and coffee irritate trouble. Tongue coated white and bad taste in mouth, restless sleep. Please prescribe and tell cause of trouble.—Mrs. J. M. R.

The symptoms indicate rheumatic difficulties more than kidney trouble and analysis of the urine should be made; however, would suggest diet of 2 pieces of toast or rusk 3 times daily, with one pint of fresh buttermilk every two hours during the day; continue this from 6 to 10 days; some patients find one-half pint of buttermilk sufficient. You will not lose strength on this diet, but may lose a little weight; you will feel fine afterward and kidneys will be in fine shape; drink lots of water. Chew the toast well.

ROYAL WORCESTER & BON TON
NON RUSTABLE CORSETS.
THE SECRET IS OUT.

Ease and grace are telling charms, and it is a clever woman who makes the most of them. The makers of the world-renowned Royal Worcester and Bon Ton corsets in all the models follow the natural outlines of the figure, skillfully adapting them to the dictates of prevailing fashion.

Freedom of motion is retained. A graceful and stylish figure is attained without sacrificing comfort, and the expense of these excellent corsets is very modest.

ARE YOU STOUT?

There is no valid excuse for a poor figure, even though a woman be fleshy. ADJUSTO corsets have made it unnecessary for those who have grown stout to deplore the fact.

ADJUSTO corsets are designed to comfortably and surely conceal superfluous flesh, training it into handsome curves by means of the wonderful reducing bands. The abdomen and hips are supported and reduced by these easily adjusted bands. Let us show you the ADJUSTO.

Royal Worcester corsets - $1.00, 1.50, 2.00, 2.50

Bon Ton corsets - $3.00, 3.50

Adjusto corsets - $3.00, 3.50

SENATE PASSES SUGAR MEASURE

Would Save $20,000,000 to Consumers and Cut Revenue $5,500,000.

BIG COMPROMISE IS REACHED

Senators Lodge and Bristow Finally Come to an Understanding Over Revision—Abolition of Dutch Standard May Help Some.

Washington, July 29.—A Republican sugar tariff bill, the first purely Republican revision measure of the present congress, was passed in the senate. Deserving their allies of the last two days, the Republican progressives, by an ironclad agreement with the regulars, succeeded in passing a tariff reduction bill which they believe President Taft will sign if it reaches him.

The sugar bill was a compromise between the Lodge plan, endorsed by the regular Republicans and the Bristow bill, behind which the progressives lined up. It would cut the present sugar duty of $1.90 to $1.60; would abolish the Dutch standard, under which practically no refined sugar can be imported; and would abolish the 7½ cent "refiners differential," an additional duty on refined sugar, which, it is claimed, has accrued directly to the profit of the sugar refiners.

Saves Consumers $20,000,000.
It is estimated that the sugar tariff reduction, if it becomes effective, will reduce government customs receipts about $5,500,000, while its saving in the retail sugar bill of the nation is estimated at $20,000,000.

The Democratic free sugar bill passed by the house did not come to vote in the senate. The Bristow-Lodge amendment was first adopted in the committee of the whole by a vote of 37 to 25. Senators Thornton and Foster of Louisiana, Democrats, voting with the Republicans.

House Bill Substitute Lost.
The senate Democrats then offered their substitute for the house bill, proposing a one-third reduction in the existing sugar tariff. This was defeated, 36 to 24, the Republican regulars and progressives holding to their agreement. The Bristow-Lodge bill finally passed the senate with all but two Democrats voting for it. The final vote was 52 to 3, the negative votes being cast by Senators Heyburn, Republican, and Foster and Thornton, Democrats.

The senate bill would reduce the duty on Cuban sugar, which comes in under the reciprocity treaty at $1.34, to about $1.20 per hundred pounds. The maximum reduction of duty on all refined sugar is three-tenths of a cent a pound.

Three measures—the wool schedule, the excise bill and the sundry civil appropriations bill—will be sent by the house to conference this week, according to the statements of house leaders.

MRS. PERKINS IS WORRIED

Woman Charged With Stealing McNamara Auto Near Calapse.

New York, July 29.—Mrs. Clara L. Perkins, who is charged with stealing an automobile belonging to Nicholas J. McNamara, a San Mateo, Cal., banker, is near collapse in the West Side police court prison. Mrs. Perkins came here as the companion of Mrs. Margaret J. McNamara, wife of the banker, who with her two sons, a valet and a chauffeur, left the California town, it is alleged, in the banker's automobile and without his permission.

MAN AND GIRL FOUND DEAD

Wedding Party Find Bodies in Vacant Hall in Chicago.

Chicago, July 29.—While he and his bride were making preparations for their wedding festivities at Libuse hall, 2029 West Twelfth street, the groom, H. Lisnek, 1813 Sheldon street, attracted by the odor of gas, discovered the dead bodies of Katharina Velek and John Cizek, the manager of the hall. The girl was found in a bed in a small room on the third floor of the building with a gas tube in her mouth. Close beside her on the floor lay Cizek with a bullet wound in his right temple.

OLYMPIC ATHLETES HOME

Big Crowd Welcomes Victorious Team As Steamer V�derland Docks.

New York, July 29.—Bearing the first division of America's victorious Olympic team, the steamer V�derland arrived at this port today. Although many of the winners at the games are still touring Europe, giving exhibitions, there was a large squad of point winners on the V�derland. A big crowd welcomed the returning athletes as the steamer warped into her slip at the Chelsea docks.

Brother's Blood Didn't Save Her.
Washington, July 29.—Although her brother, Thomas Searles, bared his arm for thirty minutes for the transfusion of his blood to his dying sister, Miss Jean Searles, secretary to Congressman Gordon Lee of Georgia, the sacrifice was unavailing, and Miss Searles died at Providence hospital.

BICYCLE WAS STOLEN.

While Herbert Hoon was listening to the concert at the Assembly last evening, someone stole the wheel which he left on the outside of the auditorium.

The very least the perpetrator of the trick can do is to return the bicycle to the home of its owner, 910 North Crawford avenue.

Three base hits—E. Whitebread. Schrock. Home run—C. Whitebread. Stolen bases—Vaile, O'Malley, Phillips, Burke, C. Keenan, J. Keenan, C. Whitebread, Cummins Double play—C. Keenan to C. Whitebread. Bases on balls—Off Cummins 6, off Shippert 2. Struck out—By Cummins 5; by Shippert 4. Left on bases—Cardinals 3; Stars 6. Umpires—Keyser and Heft. Time of game—1:30.

Notes of the Game.

Cummins had an unique record in the second inning, in that while but three men faced him, two of them got on first. It happened thusly: Phil lips struck out; Schrock drew a pass but was forced at second by Minnehan and Joey Keenan threw Minnehan out a mile when he tried to steal.

After Cummins had gone the first five innings without allowing a hit and only three men an inning faced him, the fans pulled hard for him to get a no hit game. He continued his good work in the sixth but his own wildness bled the prospects in the seventh when, with one down, he passed Vaile and O'Malley (not the clothiers) in succession.

The Stars got to Shippert right in the eighth when Connors, Monahan, Emmert and Whitebread hit consecutively. Monahan's smash went to the river and was good for the circuit but he was called out for failing to touch second. However, after Heft had singled Chet Whitebread smashed one into deep center and he made the trip around the sacks.

Browns Challenge Winners.

The Dixon Browns team has issued a challenge to the winning Stars for the local championship and specify their willingness that the winners shall take all the gate receipts and a side bet, while the losers shall pay all expenses. The management of the Stars has not yet received the formal challenge and will make no comment until he does.

AUTOGRAPH TELLS A TALE

Character of the Kaiser Revealed to Expert by Close Analysis of His Signature.

There is always a certain amount of interest attached to the deductions drawn by graphologists from the signatures of eminent men. Here, for example, is an illuminating description of the kaiser's autograph, supplied by an eminent Berlin graphologist:

"To begin with, there is a croch, a sign of pertinacity, followed by a vertical dash, showing audacity, energy, regardless of any obstacle. Then there is an acute angle, a sign of firmness and aggressiveness. The first stroke of the 'W' indicates a feeling of superiority over the rest of the universe. The termination of the imperial 'W' suggests that the sovereign sometimes finds himself struggling with the multitude of his thoughts, or the power of his instincts.

"The other letters forming the signature show similar characteristics," the graphologist proceeds. "The final 'm' is indicative of great diplomacy, which to the analyst suggests subtlety. The letter also suggests the impossibility of the suppression of the 'ego.' The flourish which terminates the imperial autograph shows a suppleness of spirit, a desire to be loved, also self-esteem.

"The two terminating points indicate defiance and generally the characteristics are those of an extraordinary imagination."

Delicate Scales.

In the personal laboratory of Sir William Ramsay, at University college, London, is a new pair of scales so delicately adjusted that they will weigh a seven-millionth part of an ounce. The room is in semi-darkness. So delicate are these wonderful scales that their balance is disturbed by the alteration of temperature caused by the turning on of an electric light at the other end of the room. The operator has to leave them for an hour in darkness—after he has tipped from the room so that his footfall should not set up any vibration—and then read them swiftly before any change in the temperature has had time to affect them. The scales, only a few inches long, appears a mere web of glass with its frail supports. It is not made of glass, however, explains Sir William, but of silica, which expands and contracts under the effect of heat far less than glass.

Public Schools.

In antiquity the masses of the people grew up in ignorance of things literary. Public education—the education that exists for the masses of the people—began, practically, with John Calvin's rule in Geneva, from which time popular education had steadily gained ground. The free school system had its beginning in Great Britain, about the year 1780, with Robert Raikes and his Sunday school movement. It was not until 1860, however, that the free public schools began to get itself firmly rooted in the British Isles. In this country from the start the idea of universal education was championed by Jefferson and other leaders among us, and the idea has never ceased to be fundamental with us, as absolutely necessary to the prevention of the liberty on which the government is founded.

THIEF NOT ALTOGETHER BAD

Proved He Had at Least Some Consideration for Victim He Had Wronged.

In the mall of a local sporting goods dealer, recently, was a letter which indicated that the writer was considerate, even though he failed to back up his consideration with square dealing in its entirety, relates the Indianapolis News. The letter bore a Peoria (Ill.) postmark and read in substance as follows:

"Peoria, Ill. Gentlemen—I am enclosing you a pawn check for $4.50 on the loan office in your city. The check is for an Arrow bicycle, which I know you sell. It was stolen in Indianapolis. By referring to your records and comparing the number on the wheel with your books you will be able to find the owner. No doubt he will be willing to present inclosed check with $4.50 in exchange for his wheel, I am, yours truly."

The writer neglected to sign his name, but the store was able to find the owner and the wheel was reclaimed.

CHAPTER XIV.

Mahomed Offers Freedom.

Fortune had slept, but only after hours of watchful terror. The slightest sound outside the tent sent a scream into her throat, but she succeeded each time in stifling it. Once the evil laughter of a hyena came over her ears, shivering. Alone! She laid her head upon the wadded saddle-bags and wept silently, and every sob tore at her heart. She must keep up the face of being brave when she knew that she wasn't. The men must not be discouraged. Her deportment would characterize theirs; any sign of weakness upon her side would correspondingly depress them the more. She prayed to God to give her the strength to hold out. She was afraid of Mahomed; she was afraid of his grim smile, afraid of his mocking eyes; she could not sponge out the scene wherein he had so gratuitously kicked Horace in the side. Horace! No, she did not believe that she would ever forgive him for this web which he had spun and fallen into himself. Two things she must hide for the sake of them all: her fear of Mahomed and her knowledge of Rynne's trickery.

What part in this tragedy had the Arab assigned her? Her fingers twined and untwined, and she rocked and rocked, bit her lips, lay down, sat up and rocked again. But for the exhaustion, but for the insistent call of nature, she would never have closed her eyes that night.

And her mother! What would her mother believe, after the scene that had taken place between them? What could she believe, save that her daughter had fulfilled her threat, and run away? And upon this not unreasonable supposition her mother would make no attempt to find out what had become of her. Perhaps she would be glad, glad to be rid of her and her questions. Alone! Well, she had always been alone.

The only ray of sunshine in all was the presence of Jones. She felt, subtly, that he would not only stand between her and Mahomed, but also between her and Rynne.

"Hush!" whispered George. "Don't

"Don't Worry Any More About the Rug, Then. I Know Where It Is."

let her see you like this. She mustn't know."

"You don't understand," replied Rynne miserably.

"I believe I do." George's heart was heavy. This man was in love with her, too.

Rynne struck the tears from his eyes and turned aside his head. He was sick in soul and body. To have walked blindly into a trap like this, of his own making, too! Fool! What had possessed him, usually so keen, to trust the copper-bellied devil? All for the sake of one glass of wine! With an effort entailing no meager pain in his side, he stifled the strangling hiccoughs, swung round and tried to smile reassuringly at the girl.

"You are better?" she asked.

There was in the tone of that question an answer to all his dreams. One night's work had given him his ticket to the land of those weighed and found wanting. She knew; how much he did not care; enough to read his guilt.

It appeared to George that she was accepting the situation with a philosophy deeper than either his or Rynne's. Not a whimper, not a plaint, not a protest so far had she made. She was a Roland in petticoats.

"Oh, I'm bashed up a bit," said Rynne. "I'll get my legs in a day or so. Fortune, will you answer one question?"

"As many as you like."

"How did you get here?"

"Don't you know?"

George wasn't certain, but the girl's voice was cold and accusing.

"Yes. Wasn't it the note that you wrote to me?"

Rynne took his head in his hands, wearily. "I wrote you no note, Fortune; I have never written you a note of any kind. You do not know my handwriting from Adam's. In God's name, why didn't you ask your mother or your uncle? They would have recognized the forgery at once. Who gave it to you?"

"Mahomed himself."

"Damn him!" Rynne grew strong under the passing fit of rage. "No, don't tell me to be silent. I don't care about myself. I'm the kind of a man who pulls through, generally. But this takes the spine out of me. I'm to blame; it's all my fault."

"Say no more about it." She believed him. She really hadn't thought him capable of such baseness, though at the time of her abduction she had been inclined to accuse him. That he was here, a prisoner like herself, was conclusive evidence, so far as she was concerned, of his innocence. But she knew him to be responsible for the presence of Jones; knew him to be culpable of treachery of the meanest order; knew him to be lacking in generosity and magnanimity toward a man who was practically his benefactor. "What does Mahomed want?"

"The bally rug, Fortune. And Jones here, who had it, says that it is gone."

"Vanished, magic-carpet-wise," supplemented George.

"And Jones would have given it up."

"And a thousand like it, if we could have bought you out of this."

"Jones and I could have managed to get along."

"We shouldn't have mattered."

"And would you have returned to Mr. Jones his thousand pounds?"

"Yes, and everything else I have," quite honestly.

"Don't worry any more about the rug, then. I know where it is."

"You?" cried the two men.

"Yes. I stole it. I did so, thinking to avert this very hour; to save you from harm," to George, "and you from doing a contemptible thing," to Rynne.

"It is in my room, done up in the big steamer-roll. And now I am glad that I stole it."

Rynne laughed weakly.

Said George soberly: "What contemptible thing?" He remembered Mahomed's words in regard to Rynne as the latter lay insensible in the sand.

Rynne, quick to seize the opportunity of solving, to his own advantage, the puzzle for George, and at the same time guiding Fortune away from a topic, the danger of which she knew nothing, raised a hand. "I bribed Mahomed to kidnap you, Jones. Don't be impatient. You laughed at me when I laid before you the prospectus of the United Romance and Adventure Company. I wished to prove to you that the concern existed. And so here is your adventure upon approval. I thought, of course, you still had the rug. Mahomed was to carry you into the desert for a week, and by that time you would have surrendered the rug, returned to Cairo, the hero of a full-fledged adventure. Lord! what a mess of it I've made. I forgot, next to this bally rug, Mahomed loved me."

"The hitherto credulous George had of late begun to look into facts instead of dreams. He did not believe a word of this amazing confession, despite the additional testimony of Fortune, relative to Rynne's statements made to her in the bazaars."

"The bitter bitten," was George's sole comment.

Rynne breathed easier.

"Why not tell Mahomed at once, and have him send a courier back for the rug?" suggested Fortune.

"By Jove, that clears up everything. We'll do it immediately." George felt better than he had at any stage of the adventure. Here was a simple way out of the difficulty.

"Softly," said Rynne. "Let us come in to the lean facts. If that rug is in your room, Fortune, your mother has discovered it long before now. She will turn it over to your estimable uncle. None of us will ever see it again, I'm thinking. The Major knows that Jones gave me a thousand pounds for it." Struck by a sense of impending disaster, Rynne began to fumble in his pockets. Gone! Every shilling of it gone! "He's got that, too; Mahomed; the cash you gave me, Jones. Wait a moment; don't speak; things are whirling about some. Over nine hundred pounds; every shilling of it. We mustn't let him know that I've missed it. I've got to play weak in order to grow strong. . . . But they will at least start up a row as to your whereabouts, Fortune."

"No," thoughtfully; "no, I do not think they will."

The undercurrent was too deep for George. He couldn't see very clearly just then. The United Romance and Adventure Company; was that all? Was there not something sinister behind that name, concerning him? He looked patiently from the girl to the adventurer.

Rynne stared at the yellow desert beyond. His brain was clearing rapidly under the stimulus of thought. He himself did not believe that they would send out search-parties either for him or for Fortune. He could not fathom what had given Fortune her belief; but he realized that his own was based upon the recollection of that savage mood when he had thrown down the gauntlet. Now they would accept it. He had run away with Fortune as he had boldly threatened to do. The mother and her precious brother would proceed at once to New York without him. He had made a fine muddle of it all. But for a glass of wine and a grain too much of confidence, he had not been here this day.

Mahomed, himself astray by this time, came over to the group, leisurely. The three looked like conspirators to his suspicious eye, but unlike conspirators they made no effort to separate because he approached. He understood: as yet they were not afraid of him. That was one of the reasons he hated white men; they could seldom be forced to show fear, even when they possessed it. Well, these three should know what fear was before they saw the last of him. He carried a kurbash, a cowhide whip, which he twirled idly, even suggestively. First, he came to George.

"If you have Yhiorde, there is still a chance for you. Cairo is but fifty miles away. Bagdad is several hundred." He drew the whip caressingly through his fingers.

"I do not lie," replied George, a truculent sparkle in his eyes. "I told you that I had it not. It was the truth."

A ripple of anxiety passed over Mahomed's face. "And you?" turning upon Rynne, with suppressed savagery. How he longed to lay the lash upon the dog!

"Don't look at me," answered Rynne waspishly. "If I had it I should not be here." Ah, for a bit of his old strength! He would have strangled Mahomed then and there. But the drug and the beating had weakened him terribly.

"If I give you the rug," interposed Fortune, "will you promise freedom to us all?"

Mahomed stepped back, nonplussed. He hadn't expected any information from this quarter.

"I have the rug," declared Fortune calmly, though she could scarcely hear her own voice, her heart beat so furiously.

"You have it?" Mahomed was confused. Here was a turn in the road upon which he had set no calculation. All three of them!

"Yes. And upon condition that you liberate us all, I will put it into your hands. But it must be my writing this time."

A white man would have blushed under the reproach of her look. Mahomed smiled amiably, pleased over his cleverness. "Where is the kisweh?"

"The Holy Yhiorde. Where is it?"

"That I refuse to tell you. Your word of honor first, to bind the bargain."

Rynne laughed. It acted upon Mahomed like a goad. He raised the whip, and had Rynne's gaze averted the part of an inch, the blow would have fallen.

"You laugh?" snarled Mahomed.

"Why, yes. A bargain with your honor makes me laugh."

"And your honor?" returned Mahomed fiercely. He wondered why he held his hand. "I have matched trickery against trickery. My honor has not been called. I fed you, I gave you drink; in return you lied to me, dishonored me in the eyes of my friends, and one of them you killed."

"It was my life or his," exclaimed Rynne, not relishing the recital of this phase. "It was my life or his; and he was upon my back."

Fortune shuddered. Presently she laid her hand upon Mahomed's arm.

"Would you take my word of honor?"

Mahomed sought her eyes. "Yes. I read truth in your eyes. Bring me the rug, and my word of honor to you, you shall go free."

"But my friends?"

"One of them," Mahomed laughed unpleasantly. It was an excellent idea. "One of them shall go free with you. It will be for you to choose which. Now, you dog, laugh, laugh!" and the tongue of the kurbash bit the dust within an inch of Rynne's feet.

"What shall I do?" asked Fortune miserably.

"Accept," urged Rynne. "If you are afraid to choose one or the other of us, Jones and I will spin a coin."

"I agree," said George, very unhappy.

"Have you any paper, Jones?"

George searched. He found the dance-card to the ball at the hotel. In another pocket he discovered the little pencil that went with it.

"You write," said Mahomed to Fortune.

"I intend to," Fortune took the card and pencil and wrote as follows:

"Mother: Horace, Mr. Jones and I are prisoners of the man who owned the rug which you will find in the large steamer-roll. Give it to the courier who brings this card. And under no circumstances set spies upon his track." In French she added: "We are bound for Bagdad. In case Mahomed receives the rug and we are not liberated, wire the embassy at Constantinople and the consulate at Bagdad."

FORTUNE.

She gave it to Mahomed.

"Read it out loud," he commanded. While he spoke English fluently, he could neither read nor write in any serviceable degree. The note he had given to Fortune had been written by a friend of his in the bazaars who had upon a time lived in New York.

He read slowly, slightly ausing a she evaded the French script.

"That will do," Mahomed agreed.

He shouted for one of the boys, bade him saddle the bagin or racing-camel, which of all those twelve, alone was his, and he off to Cairo. The boy dipped his bowl into the kettle, and five minutes later was speeding back toward Cairo at a gait that would bring him there late that night.

Fortune and George and Rynne watched him till he disappeared below a dip and was gone from view. In the minds of the three watchers the same question rose: would he be too late? George was cheerful enough thereafter, but his cheerfulness was not of the infectious kind.

At noon the caravan was once more upon its way. Rynne was able to ride. The fumes of whatever drug had been administered to him had finally evaporated, and he felt only bruised, old, disheartened. An evil day for him when he had set forth for Bagdad in quest of the rug. He was confident that there would be no rug awaiting the courier, and what would be Mahomed's procedure when the boy returned empty-handed was not difficult to imagine. Mahomed was right; so far honor had not entered into the contest. According to his lights, the Arab was only paying coin for coin. But for the girl, Rynne would have accepted the situation with a shrug, to await that moment when Mahomed, eased by the sense of security, would naturally relax vigilance. The presence of Fortune changed the whole face of the affair. Mahomed could have his eyes and heart if he would but spare her. He must be patient; he must accept insults, even physical violence, but some day he and Mahomed would play the final round.

His past, his foolish, futile past; all the follies, all the petty crimes, all the low dissolutions in which he had indulged, seemed trooping about his camel, mocking and gibbering at him. Why hadn't he lived clean like Jones there? Why hadn't he fought temptation as he had fought men? Environment was no excuse; bringing-up offered no palliation; he had gone wrong simply because his inclinations had been wrong. On the other hand, no one had ever tried to help him back to a decent living. His mother had died during his childhood, and her influence had left no impression. His father had been a money-maker, consumed by the pleasure of building up pyramids of gold. He had never reasoned with his youngest-born; he had paid his bills without protest or reproach; it was so much a month to be written down in the expense account. And the first-born had been his natural enemy since the days of the nursery. Still, he could not acquit himself; his own arraignment was as keen as any judge could have made. Strong as he was physically, brilliant as he was mentally, there was a mortal weakness in his blood; and search as he might the history of his ancestors, their lives shed no light upon his own.

In stating that his face had been granted that dubious honor and concern of the perpetrators of the rogues' gallery, he had merely given rein to a seizure of soul-bitterness. But there was truth enough in the statement that he had been short in his accounts many thousands at his father's bank; gambling debts; and in making no effort to replace the loss, he was soon found out by his brother, who seemed too good to dishonor him. He was given his choice: to sign over his million, due him a year later (for at this time the father was dead), or go to prison. The scandal of the affair had no weight with his brother; he wanted the younger out of the way. Like the hot-headed fool he was, he had signed away his inheritance, taken a paltry thousand and left America, facing imprisonment if he returned. That was the kind of a brother he had. Once he had burned his bridges, there came to him a dozen ways by which he could have extricated himself. But once a fool, always a fool!

Disinherited, outcast, living by his wits, ingenious enough; the finer senses callousing under the contact with his inferiors; a gambler, a hard drinker periodically; all in all, a fine portrait for any gallery given over to rogues. And he hadn't worried much over the moral problem confronting him, that the way of the transgressor is hard. It was only when love rent the veil of his fatuity that he saw himself as he really was.

Love! He gazed ahead at Fortune under the mahmal. That a guileless young girl as she was should enchain him! That the sight of her should always send a longing into his soul to go back and begin over! His jaws hardened. Why not? Why not try to recover some of the crumbs of the fine things he had thrown away? At least enough to permit him to go again among his fellows without constantly looking behind to note if he were followed? By the Lord Harry! once he was out of this web of his own weaving, he would live straight; he swore that every dollar hereafter put in his pocket should be an honest one. Fortune could never be his wife. He came to this fact without any roundabout or devious byways. In the first place, he knew that he had not touched her; she had only been friendly; and now even her friendship hung by a thread. All right. The love he bore her was going to be his salvation just the same; and at this moment he was deadly in earnest.

It was after nine when they were ferried across the two canals, the fresh-water and the salt, several miles below Scerapeum. The three weary captives saw a great liner slip past slowly and majestically upon its way to the Far East. She radiated with light and cheer and comfort; and all could hear faintly the pulsations of her engines. So near and yet so far: a cup of water to Tantalus! At midnight they made camp. There were no palms this time; simply a well in the center of a jumble of huge boulders. The tents were pitched to the southwest, for now the wind blew, biting from the land of northern snows; and a fire was a welcome thing. This was Arabia; Africa had been left behind. Here they awaited the return of the courier, who arrived two days later, dead tired. The persons to whom the card had been sent had sailed for Naples with the steamer Ludwig. Mahomed turned upon the three miscreants.

"I have you three, then; and by the beard of the Prophet, you shall pay, you shall pay! You have robbed and beaten and dishonored me; and you shall pay!"

"Am I guilty of any wrong toward you?" faltered the girl. Her mother had gone. She had hoped against hope.

"No," cried Mahomed. He laughed. "You are free to return to Cairo. . . . alone! Free to take your choice of these two men to accompany you. Free, free as the air. . . . Well, why do you hesitate?"

"I have you three, then; and you shall pay."

DECIDE YOURSELF

THE OPPORTUNITY IS HERE.

BACKED BY TESTIMONY.

Don't take our word for it.

Don't depend on a stranger's statement.

Read Dixon endorsement.

Read the statements of Dixon citizens.

And decide for yourself.

Here is one case of it:

E. B. Fisher, barber 116 Hennepin Ave., Dixon, Ill., says: "All I said about Doan's Kidney Pills in 1909 when I publicly recommended them I am glad to confirm at this time. I know that they are just as represented. I had rheumatic pains through my back and limbs and when I stood in one position for any length of time it was hard for me to move. My kidneys acted irregularly and contained sediment. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I got a supply at Leake Bros.' Drug store, and they did me so much good that I continued taking them. They made me strong and well. I still used this remedy once in awhile and it keeps my kidneys in good working order."

MINORITY REPORT OF STEEL QUIZ

Conclusions of Republican Members of Stanley Committee Given Out.

2 SIGN DOCUMENT; 2 DISSENT

Federal Incorporation of Concerns Engaged in Interstate Commerce Whose Capitalization Exceeds $50,000,000 Is the Keynote.

Washington, July 29.—The federal incorporation of all concerns engaged in interstate commerce whose capitalization or value exceeds $50,000,000, is the keynote recommendation of the minority members of the Stanley steel investigation committee. The report of the Republican members of the investigating committee was made public here.

The full report is signed only by Representatives Gardner and Danforth. The remaining Republican members, Representative Sterling and Young of Michigan, file individual dissents on the exact character of remedial legislation needed.

Messrs. Sterling and Young agree with their Republican colleagues that federal incorporation is a remedy for present industrial evils, but they decline to go so far as to recommend the federal regulation of prices, which Gardner and Danforth advocate in the event the situation cannot otherwise be met.

Salient Features of Report. The four Republican members agree on the following salient findings of fact as developed by the long investigation of the United States Steel corporation:

That J. P. Morgan & Co. received $52,500,000 for organizing the corporation and that of the capitalization of $1,400,000,000 nearly one-half was water.

That the average annual earnings of the steel corporation have been from 11 to 12 per cent of its assets and the corporation controls more than one-half of the crude and finished steel business of the country.

That the average wholesale prices of steel products has been lowered since the corporation was formed, but that the corporation and all independent have an understanding as to price.

PICK JURY FOR MURDER TRIAL

Former Prosecutor Faces Charge of Murder—Counsel Completes Selection of Jury After Examining 170.

Vienna, July 29.—After examining 170 talesmen, both sides in the trial of former State's Attorney Thomas H. Sheridan, charged with murder, completed the selection of the twelve men who will hear the testimony. Sheridan is charged with "killing Harry Thacker September 10, 1910. Thacker was killed at the foot of the stairs leading to the office of Sheridan, who was then editor and proprietor of the Vienna News.

The shooting is said to have followed Thacker's objections to Sheridan's editorials concerning his father, F. B. Thacker, who had been a county commissioner.

Sheridan's trial has been postponed several times. Difficulty was experienced in the selection of the jury because of the intense feeling that is being displayed.

Residents of the surrounding country have taken sides in the matter and attorneys for both sides have intimated that they intend to fight every contestable point.

Fire Marshal Makes Report.

Springfield, July 29.—The first annual report of the fire marshal's department of Illinois has been issued, covering a period of five months, during which the department was in active operation, up to January 1 of this year. This shows, outside the city of Chicago, that 55 arrests were made for incendiarism. Out of that number 38 were held to the grand jury and 33 were indicted. Twelve of these persons have been tried, with seven convictions and three confessions of guilt.

The period covered by the report was largely one of organization, and so far this year the department has obtained a much larger number of indictments and convictions. C. J. Doyle, now acting secretary of state, who was formerly fire marshal, states in his report that the fire waste in Illinois was approximately $11,000,000, of which 50 per cent. was preventable.

These preventable losses were caused by "criminal carelessness," "criminal ignorance" and "deliberate arson." He urged the use of all the money contributed by the insurance companies for the maintenance of the department, the granting of police power to the fire marshal and deputies, compulsory requirement of instruction on fire hazards in the public schools and at least one fire drill a month, and placing the fire escape law under the jurisdiction of the fire marshal's department.

Banks Allow Tax Increase.

Chicago, July 29.—Increases aggregating $20,000,000, it is said, have been conceded in tax valuation adjustments by the banks of Cook county. Frank A. Vogler, chief of the board of review, gave out the information. A $6,000,000 raise was reported by the First National bank alone, according to Mr. Vogler. The Continental and Commercial National bank was second with a $3,000,000 advance. Two million dollars increase was allowed by the First Trust and Savings bank, nearly a million by the Harris Trust and Savings bank, and boosts of $1,000 to $20,000 in forty small institutions. Reviewers said women, with their bargain day instincts, get better decreases than men. Many women were among the complainants during the day.

Makes Record in Divorce.

Ottawa, July 29.—Mrs. Joseph Knecht, wife of a blacksmith, has sued for a third divorce from the same man. She and Mr. Knecht were married first in Ottawa December 13, 1888. Their second wedding was October 10, 1903, and the third ceremony was performed March 3, 1908. Mrs. Knecht obtained two divorces from Mr. Knecht on the ground of cruelty. She makes the same charge in the bill which was filed in the circuit court.

Horse Kills Capitalist's Son.

Rockford, July 29.—Forbes Talcott, son of Walt Talcott, Rockford capitalist, who, after leaving Princeton college, preferred life as a ranch to the comforts of a home in the city, is dead in Tucson, Ariz., from injuries suffered Tuesday morning when his horse went down with him in a cattle roundup. Mr. Talcott was a member of the Princeton Cottage club.

Two Aurora Youths Drowned.

Aurora, July 29.—Two young men were drowned while paddling a canoe on the river. They are Russell Gordon Wroout, nineteen years old, son of Charles Wroout, 580 Main street, and Albert Cummings, twenty-six years old, son of Lawrence Cummings, 487 Main street. A sudden gust of wind capsized the craft.

Throngs at Review of Seventh.

Springfield, July 29.—The popularity of the "Fighting Seventh," the Irish regiment of the Illinois National Guard, was attested by the presence of 5,000 spectators at Camp Lincoln to witness the review of the regiment by Governor Deneen and the evening parade which followed.
